By Glenn Frankel Cashungton Post Service

LOD. Israel --- Five gunmen, re-ported to be criminals, who hijacked a bus carrying Soviet chil-dren and traded them for $2 million and a cargo plane, surren-dered peacefully Friday after flying to Israel,

The drama hegan Thursday night when the hijackers — four men and the wife of one of them commandeered a bus with 30 children, a teacher and a driver in the southern Soviet city of Ordzhoni-kidze and demanded the ransom in U.S. dollars and a plane to fly them out of the country, according to Soviet authorities and members of the flight crew.

The Soviets were hit by a wave of public criticism over the death of nine persons when security forces stormed a passenger plane during a hijacking last March. This time they decided to comply and provided an eight-man crew to fly the plane, which left Friday morning from the city of Mineralnyye Vody to the Soviet republic of Georgia. It all ended without bloodshed

The hijackers first sent out three crew members who requested a Russian-language interpreter, ac-cording to Brigadier General Ephraim Lapid, the army's chief spokesman. He said the interpreter entered the aircraft and negotiated the quick release of the crew, who filed out from the plane. The hijackers then followed, one by one, handing over a shotgun and four pistols to Israeli troops on the ground.

"In a few minutes it was over without any violence," General La-pid said. "The atmosphere was very calm without any tension. It was 180 degrees different from what we had expected." While the identities of the gunmen were uncertain, soldiers at the scene said they appeared to be about 30 years old.

Reuters reported that Communist Party sources in Ordzhonikidze said the five included two ethnic Russians, two Armenians and one Ossetian, a member of a small trans-Caucasian national minority. They said they believed the hijack-

MOSCOW - After talks Friday

Hold a Summit

Pledging cooperation on the re-structuring of their economies and resolution of the regional conflict in Cambodia, Mr. Gorbachev and the Chinese foreign minister. Oian Qichen, agreed that the Soviet leader would meet with Deng Xiaoping, the senior Chinese leader, in the first full-fledged Chinese-Soviet simmit meeting since 1959.

A visit by the Soviet foreign minister, Eduard A. Shevardnadze, to Beijing, will be part of preparations or the summit meeting, the official Soviet news agency Tass said Friday in a report issued after the talks. His trip is expected to be in January or February.

"We are satisfied, on the whole, with the development of cooperation in various spheres of life," Mr. Gorbachev said after his meeting with Mr. Qian. "But we believe that this is only the beginning.

"The fact that our two great peoples are now marching along the road of transformation and reform is an important additional factor contributing to broader Soviet-Chinese relations," he said.

This week's talks, which end Saturday, will focus on several other key issues that have kept a chill in relations in recent years, including the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan and the extensive deployment by both sides of military forces along the Chinese-Soviet border.

The three days of talks opened Thursday with discussions between Mr. Qian and Mr. Shevardnadze about the Soviet-supported presence of Vietnamese troops in Cambodia, the most contentious issue in Chinese-Soviet relations.

Vietnam, in an announcement apparently timed to coincide with r. Oian's arrival in Moscow, said 18,000 Victnamese troops would be withdrawn from Cambodia from Dec. 15 to Dec. 21. Hanoi said the departure would bring the total number of troops withdrawn this year to 50,000. The two foreign ministers agreed to set up a working group on Cambodia, one of the main obstacles to mproving ties.

During the talks, Mr. Gorbachev said that settling such regional dis-putes would be in the interests of China, the Soviet Union, and Vietnam, as well as the Cambodian people

Mr. Qian had been expected to push the Soviet Union to give a detailed timetable for Vietnam to withdraw its 100,000 to 120,000 troops from Cambodia. But it was not clear from the Tass account whether such a guarantee had been

Washington Post Serre. MOSCOW - The Soviet leader. Mikhail S. Gorbachev, intends to use his meeting with U.S. leaders next week to try to make progress oo a wide range of issues, including arms oegotiations, Central America, Afghanistan and the Middle East, a Kremlin spokesman said Friday.

The spokesman, Vladimir F. Petrovsky, a deputy foreign minister, said at a news conference that it was essential to insure "stability and predictability" in Soviet-American relations as a new president is about to take over in the United States.

Mr. Gorbachey will meet with both President Ronald Reagan and President-elect George Bush on Wednesday after addressing the United Nations General Assembly.

Angola-Namibia Accord Hits a Snag

BRAZZAVILLE, Congo (Reuters) — Peace talks on Angola and South-West Africa threatened to stall Friday as Angola and Cuba raised objections over verification of the withdrawal of Cuban troops from Angola. South-West Africa also is known as Namibia.

Foreign Minister R.F. Botha of South Africa and the defense ministe Magnus Malan, arrived to join the talks and tackle what Mr. Botha described in Johannesburg as "new difficulties." The main issues in the negotiations, already agreed in principle, are the independence of South-West Africa, which is ruled by Pretoria, and the withdrawal of 50,000 Cuban troops from Angola over 27-months. The head of the Angolan delegation, General Antonio dos Santos

Soldiers Disperse Azerbaijan Crowd

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Soviet troops dispersed a crowd of about 1.500 people who were trying to attack Armenians in Baku, capital of the southern republic of Azerbaijan, the Baku radio reported on Friday. The attacks in the center of the city were the latest upheaval in two weeks of ethnie unrest in Azerbaijan and neighboring Armenia in which 28 people have died and tens of thousands have fled their homes.

The Soviet press agency Tass announced that the government set up any commission, under Boris Y. Shcherbina, a deputy prime minister, to help refugees who have fled in both directions across the border between the two republics. The commission, including the prime ministers of Arme-nia, Azerbaijan and Georgia, will provide refugees with food, housing, medical and other consumer services and find jobs for them, Tass said-

Gorbachev Goes Deeper

A real national legislature with clearly stipulated powers ... unfettered debate ... a 10-year limit on holding office ... contested elections ... an independent judiciary. These are among the departures in what Mikhail Gorbachev calls "a rule-of-law state" made possible by "the direct involve-ment of the Soviet people in politics."

Moscow ratifies these changes even as reports come from the Caucasus of 100,000 Armenians and Azerbaijanis fleeing their homes in fear of further ethnic violence.

The Soviet leader pushes ahead with glasnost and "democratization" despite the risks and challenges to Moscow's central authority and to Communist Party control. The moves seem to reflect the conviction that perestroika, involving economic reform, cannot succeed without a much greater measure of freedom. Mr. Gorbachev and his colleagues are taking big chances in an experiment Americans can only applaud. Loosening the reins has led to the turmoil in the Caucasus, and assertions of autonomy in the Baltic republics. Mr. Gorbachev has handled these situations gingerly, on the eve of his first visit to New York. And he has dramatically underlined his intention to plow ahead with yet another glasnost landmark -- ending decades of jamming Radio Liberty, the Russian-lan-guage service of the Munich-based, U.S.-financed Radio Free Europe.

Thus millions of Soviet citizens will now have freer access to the uncensored news coverage of their own internal affairs given by Radio Free Europe, as distinguished from the Voice of America, whose broadcasts have not been jammed for two years. While rejecting demands that republics get a veto over laws passed by a parliament yet to be established, Mr. Gorbachev has not cut off the debate. His remarks have been conciliatory. In his speech this week he called for more, not less discussion: "Indeed, can there be anything more revealing than public debates in which the candidates parry questions, put forth their views and, if you like, show their worth?"

Still, in weighing the claims for the new Soviet charter, the wary will recall the famous Stalin Constitution of 1936, which also seemed to promise freedom, but under Communist tutelage. The reality was sardonically described then by a Soviet cynic: "No elections could be fairer. They put up the candidates, and we elect them."

The "they" are still there, tens of thousands of party officials at all levels of government, in every plant, office, regiment and collective farm. But what is dramatically different is Mr. Gorbachev's attitude. He is reaching outside the party, to the people. Io a totalitarian state, that is not only a bold idea; it is revolutionary.

In his first years in power, Mr. Gorbachev tried to bring about needed economic reforms principally by removing the old clique from the upper party echelons. When that proved insufficient, he moved against the party bareaucracy. Now he pushes deeper still, against ingrained popular resistance to change and toward an unprecedented and perhaps unachievable mixed dictatorial-democratic system.

Korea: It's Time for a U.S. Pullout to Begin

cent visit here, President Reagan mused that America might reduce or withdraw its 44,000 troops from South Korea if tensions in the region lessened. Now is the time to begin small cuts in U.S. forces there, to start lowering the U.S. military profile and to take related steps.

South Korea is an increasingly strong and stable ally, its economic miracle continues; it has made remarkable strides in democratization, and, to cap it all, its hosting of the Olympics was a triumph.

The balance of military power on the peninsula is gradually shifting in favor of the South, despite enormous military efforts in North Ko-rea. Sometime in the mid- or late 1990s, given present trends, Seoul will be able to defend against any North Korean thrust.

Because Pyongyang's bellicosity has not diminished and an indige-nous military balance has not been achieved, and because Northeast Asian stability depends on continued peace in Korea, it is essential to hold off for a time the American budget-cutters and Korean advocates of premature U.S. withdrawal Meanwhile, there are several measures the United States can take to preserve the essentials of its position, to constrain Kim Il Sung in the North and to defuse growing anti-Americanism in the South. First, and most important, the U.S. military profile should be low-ered. There should be a revision of the command arrangements under which an American general leads the Combined Forces Command despite the fact that the vast bulk of the forces under him are South Korean. America's military headquarters in downtown Scoul should be relocated and the site (and its golf course) turned over to the South Koreans. Second, for the acrt two or three years a small number of American troops, perhaps 10 percent of the 44,000, should be withdrawn. By the mid-90s, most or all of the ground forces can probably be withdrawn.

As the Koreans increasingly pick up support functions for the remaining American troops, they should simultaneously pay a larger share — indeed, virtually all — of the local

By Amos A. Jordan and William J. Taylor currency costs of the U.S. troop presence. Although Seoul already shares a large part of the burden, American domestic politics and defense budgeting require even more. Third, the heat in the trade dislogue needs to be reduced. It would be a major improvement if occotiations were focused not on item-byitem disputes but on broader topics such as exchange rates and the progressive acceptance by South Korea of responsibilities under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. Fourth, now that Seoul has abandoned its aim of isolating the North in favor of reconciliation, America should try hard to draw the North into a more rational relationship --gradually normalizing relations, ingrantany normalizing relations, in-cluding establishing an office in Pyongyang and resuming nonstrate-gic trade. Japan should play a role, perhaps the leading role, in bringing North Korea out of its isolation.

Despite misgivings in some South Korean conservative and military circles, most South Koreans want reconciliation with the North as rapidly as possible, with reunification in this to The New York Times.

may be beginning to break up. U.S. policy in these circumstances faces twin dangers. If America tries to hold to the status quo, it can detail North-South progress and under-mine its position in the South; if it responds to early signs of a thaw by prematurely removing troops, it can upset the regional military balance and cause the whole tentative reconciliation process to abort - perhaps even precipitate the conflict it has helped deter for 35 years. But if the United States takes sensible steps for change now while respecting its commitments, the prospects for peace and stability in the area are bright.

LONDON - In the past few weeks the Canadians have said yes and the Mexicans no. That about sums up how the battle lines are being drawn in the Great Trade Debate. The prime minister of Canada, Brian Malroney, rode to re-election on the issue of establishing a free-trade zone with the United States. Carlos Salinas de Gortari assumed the presidency of Mexico on Thursday rejecting such a possibility. No developed country in its right mind will turn its back on free trade. And no developing country will say yes to the way it is now being offered: free trade for everything but agriculture and the migration of labor. In Montreal on Monday most of the world's trade ministers will discuss the ambitious and complex goals of the so-called Uruguay Round, the successor to the great tariff-cutting exercises of the 1960s and 1970s, the Kennedy and Tokyo Rounds.

In Montreal, the representatives of Tokyo, Washington and Brussels will huff and puff mightily about each other's terms for tariff cuts. Yet, if they follow their long-term 'f interests, all the industrialized countries will be drawn toward a deal except on agriculture, where en-trenched political interests cancel out rational thinking. What Ameri-can and European farmers fear is not so much one another as the Third World farmers who, if market forces were allowed free play, could dominate world food markets by the end of this century.

Western politicians, by conniving to continue the present system, are doing the world's economic vitality no end of harm. The West's agricultural regime is, in its own way, as much a drag on world economic development as Soviet agriculture is on the Soviet Union's progress. Even the easy part finds Western policymakers resistant. Despite a solemn undertaking in 1963 to work toward scrapping restrictions on the import of tropical products into Western marketplaces, little has been done. Sales of coffee, tca, cocoa, spices and tropical fruits are still restrained by tariff charges and taxes.

Yet none of these compete with any-thing grown in the North. The one exception is sugar. Sugar beet is the Northerners' high-priced substitute for cane. Year by year the industrialized countries (except for the Soviet Union, with its commitment to Cuba) have moved to crush the life out of Third World producers.

As Europe, Japan and the United States have increased protection and subsidies for their sugar farmers ($2 billion a year in Europe alone) it has become chenger for many countries to burn their sugar cane than to har-vest it. The greatest losers have been the Caribbean and Central American nations and the Philippines -- countries, ironically, to which the West regularly voices political support. Yet it is with nontropical products that the really important long-term issues demand action — with beef and veal and with grains, in particuby a bipartisan team of experts, call for narrowing the gap by $40 billion a year until the books balance in the mid-1990s. They would limit cost-of-living increases for Social Security and federal pensions, cut Medicare doctors' fees and reduce outlays for farm subsidies, public works and trans-portation, including the Amtrak rail system, They recommend "moderate increases" in fees and in taxes on gasoline and diesel usci fuel, beer, wine and cigarettes.

For the sake of efficiency and control, the former presidents also urge that the new president and Congress agree to a budget plan that covers at least the next two years, and preferably four. On this, there are hopeful signs that Mr. Bush's people and some leading congressional Democrats agree.

But it is more important that they heed the central Ford-Carter point: Balancing the budget is critical to everything else -- national security and arms control, the savings and loan crisis, poverty, Third World debt and the trade deficit. The budget cannot be balanced if new taxes and adjustments in Social Security and defense are off limits. -THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Justice Doesn't Come Free

The Iron Fists in Gloves of Velvet

By George F. Will

Europe: Beware

WASHINGTON - From Hamburg have come rumblings of something always rare and rarely welcome in Washington: realism. The and rarely welcome in Washington; realism. The perpetrator of this faux pas is General John Galvin, supreme allied commander in Europe. In a speech to parliamentarians from NATO na-oons, and in an essay in The Washington Quar-terly, General Galvin laments the lack of politi-cal leadership concerning the continuing Soviet threat and he circu anticular threat, and he gives particulars. General Gaivin acknowledges that Mikhail Gorbachev has initiated domestic changes of great if uncertain consequences, accompanied by pleasant rhetoric. But General Galvin asks, "Is external policy really changing?" He notes that regardless of Soviet rhetoric about a shift from an offensive to a defensive configuration of conventional forces in the middle of Europe - after 40 years of denying the offensive configuration -- "the Soviet military has not changed at all."

General Galvin's focus is on "the iron that can be brought to bear on the battlefield." He says Soviet arms production is essentially unchanged. since March 1985, when Mr. Gorbachev took power. Since then, the Soviets have produced more tanks and artillery pieces than exist in the British, French and German armies combined. The Soviets are producing 700 combat aircraft per year and launching a nuclear submarine every 37 days. Consider tanks, the core of a forward deployed force capable of moving west in large units over long distances rapidly. The Warsaw Pact has 30,000 more tanks than NATO. Thirty thousand is more tanks than the entire Weinmacht production in World War II. The production rate of the Soviet T-80 is about 3,400 per year, the equivalent of a tank division a month. If all Soviet and other Warsaw Pact tank factories were closed today, and tripled, it would take NATO 10 years to catch up. Noting that the T-80 is the world's newest tank, General Galvin stresses that the acceleration of the rate of technological change coincides with a rise in the importance of even marginal technological advantages. The British won at Waterloo with the "Brown Bess," a musket the British army had then been using for 130 years. But by the time of World War II, "if you built a fighter aircraft that was slightly better than your opponent, you could sweep the skies in a short period of time. That is now true not only of fighter aircraft but of everything else. If you build tanks that can fire accurately one second faster than other tanks, will sweep the battlefield.".

The Warsaw Pact has more attack capacity than NATO on the first day of battle, or 10 or 30 days after. And proximity magnifies its advantages. A thousand ship sailings would be required for the initial reinforcement of NATO. Real Soviet change to a defensive deployment would require the movement far back from the front of the huge stocks of ammunition now in East Germany and Czechoslovakia. None has yet been moved. General Galvin wornes that the willingness of Western publics to pay for preparedness new only in response to events; the Berlin crisis, or more recently the Invasion of Afghanistan. What is lacking is sober and sobering political leadership. "Peace is breaking out all over," chirruped can-"Peace is breaking out all over," churuped can-didate Bush. His opposition to new taxes guaran-tees continuation of the four-year decline of the defense budget. When Mr. Bush meets Mr. Gor-bachev on Wednesday, he might ask when glas-oost will extend to publication of the Soviet de-fense budget, and when that budget will reflect the thetoric about changed intentions.

Some politicians seek office to do something others to be something. A president of the former type is leaving. Which type is Mr. Bush? Those for whom office is an end in itself will not tell the nation what it needs to hear. It meeds to hear from the White House what General Gaivin says of the iron that can be brought to bear on the battlefield.

Two years ago, during the Meese era at the Justice Department, leaders of the American Bar Association became concerned by charges -- from inside the federal government as well as elsewhere - that criminals were regularly able to escape jus-tice by invoking their constitutional rights. The Miranda rule, it was said, the restrictions on search and scizure, and clever defense attorneys paid with public money. were impeding the criminal justice system and working to free thousands of dangerous miscreants. A special committee of the bar associatioo was created to investigate whether these perceptions were accurate.

The committee did more than analyze statistical reports and review earlier studies. Hearings were held in three cities; the views of people who work at all stages of the American criminal justice system were sought, and a large-scale telephone inter-view survey was undertaken. More than 800 police officers, prosecutors, defense attorneys and judges submitted their views.

The results of the survey are unequivocal: The criminal justice system has many problens, but they are not due to the enforcement. of constitutional rights. The police are gener-ally well-trained about evidentiary rules and Miranda warnings, and cases are not rejected by prosecutors or thrown out of court because of failure to observe these rules. This is not simply the opinion of those questioned, it borne out by facts. Unly 0.6 to 2.35 pero of all felony arrests, for example, are lost because of illegal searches. If drug and weapons arrests are excluded, the range is only 0.3 to 0.7 percent. The committee also found that public defenders are severely overburdened and that attorneys in large cities are required to handle hundreds of cases every year, half of which are serious felonies.

What are the real reasons crime seems to be out of control? The drug problem is one answer. Police, prosecutors and judges agree that no significant impact has been made in this area in spite of the fact that enormous resources have been devoted to the arrest, prosecution and trial of drug offenders. These cases have overwhelmed the police, the courts and the corrections system to the point of distortion. And with so many resources devoted to drug-related crimes, there are shortages in other areas. Less than 3 percent of all public spending goes to support the civil and criminal justice system, and that is simply not enough. Public dissatisfaction in this area cannot be remedied by repealing the Fourth, Fifth and Sixth Amendments. Police departments, courts and correctional institutions have needs that must be understood by the public and must be addressed. That will be very expensive, but rage and rhetoric about criminals' rights are not a practical alternative.

Another Bhutto at the Top

The appointment of Benazir Bhutto as hister of Pakistan is an historic prime n moment. She becomes the first woman head of government in a Moslem state and one of the youngest in the work!. For Miss Bhutto it is the vindication she has sought for her father, Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, who was deposed in 1977 and later hanged. For Paki-stan, it is one more mark of the restoration of democracy after 11 years of military rule.

Two developments may cast a shadow over Miss Bhatto's government. The first is the professed ambition of Nawaz Sharif, who was Miss Bhutto's rival for the prime ministership, to use his likely position as chief minister of Punjab to undermine the federal government. The second arises out of the intentions of Miss Bhutto's opponeats to petition Pakistan's sharia [Islamic] courts to declare her accession to the prime ministership unconstitutional. According to some interpretations, Islam does not permit a woman to be head of government. This will be only the second time in its 41-year history that Pakistan has experienced civilian rule. The army will be watching for any mistake. The responsibility on Pakistan's civilian politicians is too great to be squandered on [local or doctrinal] conflicts. - The Times (London).

Declaring War on the IRA, Thatcher Mutes the Peace

LONDON - It was peculiar, even chilling. There on the screen, a neatly dressed woman was speaking - but no sound came from her mouth. She was Doddle McGuiness, a councillor for the Ulster town of Lon-donderry and a member of Sinn Fein, the political wing of the Irish Republi-can Army. Mrs. McGuiness, who was talking of a maternity word that had been closed, we were sold, had been silenced by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, who has prohibited British radio and television from carrying the voices of representatives of the IRA or the Ulster Defense Association, the armed Protestant group.

Britain, of course, is not Paraguay or Czechoslovakia or South Africa. But the muting of Mrs. McGuiness has somehow diminished British life. It is unlikely that anything Mrs. McGuiness could say about maternity or Mrs. Thatcher or the IRA could sturb anyone's peace. But it is just 300 years since this country achieved censed printing," and the McGuiness incident is at the edge of nightmare. It represents the IRA's first signifi-cant victory over Britain since the "troubles" in Ulster were revived 20 years ago. The armed Provisionals can and do cause terrible individual suffering; their political achievements, their prospects of driving Britain from Ulster, are taken seriously only by Irishmen in New York and Boston. Politi-. cally, the IRA is a cipher except for its symbolic expression of Catholic grievances. But now the IRA has scored a genuine political success. It is croding the liberties of free Britons.

While Mrs. McGuiness was silenced on Channel 4, Mrs. Thatcher's government announced that it was scrapping another venerable freedom, the right against self-incrimination. Since Titus Oates, the infamous 17th-century informer, Britons have been allowed to

I can recite Mr. Hawking's solu-

Milton's dream of "liberty of unli-censed printing," and the McGuiness cutors. Juries have been instructed to draw no inference from the exercise of this right. The privilege has been codi-fied in America by the Fifth Amendment, but Britons have boasted that they needed no written Bill of Rights. Now Tom King, Mrs. Thatcher's secretary of state for Northern Iroland, has torn up 300 years of history. He has said: "It is only the guilty person who says. I am not going to say anything. The right of silence helps the guilty." Its abolition will delight police everywhere. Mrs. Thatcher is frustrated. If she cannot wipe out the IRA, she will convict all suspects and make relevision applaud. Her government has waged unceasing war against TV pro-grams critical of her conduct in Ulster. One suggested that her special forces murdered three unarmed IRA suspects in Gibraltar; this program is so remote from ordinary experience as to be literally intredible. Yet Mr. Hawking is an optimist.

In 1928, excited by the recent discov-

The British Broadcasting Corpora-tico depends on Mrs. Thatcher for its moory, on a license fee voted by Parliament of her generat Ladoms Parliament at ber request. Independent broadcasters depend on government appointees for their licenses. Already, there is a softening in news and documentaries, an absence of the savage satire that once made prime ministers squirm. Mrs. Thatcher has told The Times that to defeat "your enemy in a war, you have to suspend some of your civil liberties for a time."

That is the heart of the trouble. Mrs. Thatcher thinks she is at war. The troubles in Ulster are not war, they are rooted in the sad history and social fabric of the place. There is heavy unemployment, and the rate among Catholics is twice that of Protestants. There is discrimination against Catholics, especially in jobs. If Catholic grievances were ad-dressed, which means dealing with the misery of the Protestant working class as well, support for the IRA would wither. But Mrs. Thatcher knows nothing of this. She is likely next to revive another tradicious intrinsion Yes, Mr. Hawking, but What Does It Mean?

tradition: imprisoning suspects with-out trial. There will be a fresh wound in the quality of British life; the rule of law will yield again to Mrs. Thatcher's notions of the exigencies of war.

Free Trade His Plan to Reorganize Tower Advisers Outline What Aboy His Flan to Hos Spending The DUS. Military Spending

said, but instead would offer to hold down spending for an extended period in exchange for Congress's giving the department more flexibility in using whatever money

President-elect George Bush reiterated his support for Mr. Tower. He added that "nothing is going to shake my view" about whether to choose Mr. Tower as defense secretary, apparently a reference to questions raised about Mr. Tower's personal life and about his role as a consultant to major military contractors. But Mr. Bush did not say explicitly that the post would go to Mr. Tower, and people close to the former Texas senator said he had received no firm indication that he had been chosen.

Mr. Bush has been talking to a number of aerospace executives as he continues to consider candidates for secretary and deputy secretary. On Thursday be met with Donald B. Rice, 49, president of the Rand Corp. Mr. Rice is a former Pentagon official who has been mentioned as a candidate for a senior Defense Department position. . If Mr. Tower is confirmed for the post, his associates said, he plans to argue that more weapons could be bought under a zero-growth hudget than under a larger one, provided the Pentagon received a two-year appropriation instead of continuing the practice of annual wrangling.

Mr. Reagan's military budget, which is to go to Congress Jan. 9, calls for increasing this year's total of $299.5 billion by 2 percent after allowing for inflation. Mr. Bush has indicated that he would settle for zero growth after inflation. While Mr. Tower has had to wait for Mr. Bush to announce his selections, several allegations have been made against him. They range from his freewheeling relationships with women to potential conflicts of interest if he become a defense secretary. Mr. Tower has not responded directly to these charges, leaving aides and friends to speak for him. But he is known to feel this way about the criticism:

· Women. He admits to heing too much of a swinger in his youn-ger years but tells friends he was faithful to his second wife, from whom he was divorced this year. and did not date other women until he was separated.

• Drinking. If he drank too much in the past, Mr. Tower knows be must be a model of propriety as secretary of defense.

· Conflicts of interest. Although he registered as a lohbyist in February because be was a consultant to several defense companies, he has told associates that he would remove himself from any of their programs if he became secretary.

Mr. Tower, who was chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee when he retired from the Senate in 1985, now runs Tower and Associates from a suite in Washington. His defense-industry clients include Martin-Marietta Corp.; Rockwell International Corp.; Textron Inc., and LTV Aerospace and Defense Co.

Richard Billmire, a Tower associate, said Thursday that the company does no lohbying for any foreign company but that Mr. Tower is on the board of directors of an American subsidiary of British Acrospace PLC.

• Spending policy. As a member of the Armed Services Committee, Mr. Tower was known for his staunch support of Pentagon programs. But he has told associates that he regrets having played a key role in "front-loading" the military hudget when Mr. Reagan took of-fice in 1981. He has said the Reagan rearmament program be helped design and push through Congress gave more money to the armed services than they could spend wisely.

If he becomes defense secretary, Mr. Tower has told friends, he will force the services to link their spending to a coherent strategy and cancel weapons that do not fit it.

President Ronald Reagan holding up a football given to him by Jack F. Kemp at a tribute dinner for Mr. Kemp, a former professional quarterback who is retiring after 18 years in Congress.

Adieu to a Reagan Revolutionary

Conservatives Honor Kemp, 'Humphrey of the Right'

By Clifford D. May New York Tunns Service

WASHINGTON - Veterans of the "Reagan revolution" gathered this week to celebrate their victories, lament their casualties and honor one of the most stalwart insurgents ever to storm an ideological barricade, Jack F. Kemp. About a thousand conservatives and other Republicans showed up for the $1,000-a-plate dinner in honor of Mr. Kemp, who is retiring at age 53 from the House after 18 years as a representative from upstate New York.

The proceeds will go the Heritage Foundation and the Institute for Free Enterprise Development, research organizations in Washington where Mr. Kemp is to continue to advocate the supply-side economic doctrine of low taxes, high growth and boundless opportunity for all.

Few of the economists and politicians who have most ardently championed supply-side economics have heen tapped hy President-elect George Bush, who once derided the school of thought as "voodoo economics."

But many supply-side ideas and precepts sur-vive, notably in Mr. Bush's insistence that he will impose "no new taxes," lest that bobble growth.

If Mr. Bush has a high administration job in mind for Mr. Kemp, he has kept it to himself. Mr. Kemp opposed Mr. Bush for the Republican nomination this year, portraying himself as the only legitimate ideological beir to President Ronald Reagan, and was then passed over for the vicepresidential nomination.

But Mr. Bush was one of the strongest drawing cards on the guest list at the reception and dinner Thursday night in Washington,

Also paying tribute to Mr. Kemp were Mr. Reagan: Jeane J. Kirkpatrick, the former chief U.S. delegate to the United Nations; former Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger, and for-mer Education Secretary William J. Bennett. Mr. Reagan said that eight years ago "a new sheriff and new deputies" rode into town. He called Mr. Kemp "one of the deputies, a man who when the clock struck high noon was always at my side," helping to "settle a tough frontier - Con gress - loading his six-gun with solid gold bul-The mandate of those lawmen would be renewed in the Bush administration, Mr. Reagan said. "On every important issue," he went on, "Jack has heen a leader. And he has stayed loyal to principle and to party. This year, when Jack saw that this was meant to be George Bush's time, from that point on, no one worked harder or with greater enthusiasm to help assure that George Bush hecame the next president of the United States.

The master of ceremonies was William F. Buckley Jr., the columnist, editor and longtime custodian of conservative mores. In an interview, Mr. Buckley said he douhted that "there is another member of the legislature who could command what Mr. Kemp has brought together tonight," and he commended Mr. Kemp for his "steely determination" and "genteel disposition." Roger Stone, a chief strategist in the Kemp presidential campaign who was among the throng honoring him, said, "Jack Kemp will always be someone who cares more about ideas and issues than his own political fortunes."

Over the years, Mr. Stone added, Mr. Kemp has become a sort of "Hubert Humphrey of the right, someone who thinks politics should be a positive, ovful experience, not polarization, not class war Jare. In the case of both Humphrey and Kemp. that may not make for electoral success, but that's the way they play the game."

Israeli in Iran-Contra Affair Dies in Mexico Plane Crash

By William Branigin Washington Post Service

MEXICO CITY - An Israeli arms dealer who was a key figure in the Iran-contra arms affair was killed this week in a small-plane crash while traveling under an assumed name in Mexico, according to Mexican and Israeli officials. Mexican officials said the plane apparently experienced engine trouble and attempted an emergency landing. They said an investigation was continuing. Investigators said the man was Amiram Nir, a former adviser on private plane.

counterterrorism to two Israeli prime ministers who had once briefed Vice President George Bush on secret U.S. arms deals with Iran. He was identified from an Israeli passport found on his body. In Jerusalem, Foreign Ministry officials confirmed Friday that Mr. Nir had died in the crash. The lsraeli amhassador to Mexico, Dov Shmorak, told the Israeli radio that Mr. Nir was in Mexico on private husiness. He said he had no other details.

While Mexican officials cited engine failure as the probable cause of the crash, Mr. Shmorak said the authorities reported that preliminary information suggested the crash was caused by a rain storm.

Mr. Nir's name came up in Irancontra testimony before the U.S. Congress as an associate of Colonei Oliver L. North, the former White House national security aide, in ar-rangements in 1985 and 1986 for the transfer of U.S. weapons to Iran in return for the release of American hostages held by pro-Iranian groups in Lebanon.

She did not elaborate, but she went on to emphasize that she wanted to strengthen ties with the United States and to improve relations with the Soviet Union. In a reference to India, she pointed to the planned three-day visit of Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi to Pakistan, beginning Dec. 29, for a summit meeting of regional heads of state.

"I hope our two elected governments can work to reduce tensions between India and Pakistan on the basis of justice and sovereign equality," she said.

There was no mention of Afghanistan. Earlier, a crowd of several hun-

In a warm personal letter to Miss Bhutto, which was made public in New Delhi on Friday, Mr. Gandhi urged cooperation to "build a relationship between our governments which is commensurate with the affection which our peoples have for each other." He also declared that New Delhi viewed the unity and integrity of Pakistan as a "vital element for stability and progress in South Asia."

New Delhi has often criticized Pakistan for allegedly supporting Sikh extremists in the Punjah.

Mr. Gandhi and Miss Bhutto are the first politicians born after independence to lead their respective countries. They share several other common points. It is widely believed that they have a rare opportunity to refashion relations in South Asia and hreak away from the traditional fears and concerns that have stalled friendship and led to three wars between their nations. Mr. Gandhi's letter was released a day after India ousted the mililary attache at the Pakistan Embassy and another Pakistani official

By Lawrence K. Altman

New York Times Service NEW YORK - An eminent psychiatrist's resignation in disgrace from positions at Harvard University after admitting to plagiarism has provoked a wave of protest and debate among leading psychiatrists and physicians.

Several prominent psychiatrists have expressed dismay and anger over what they believe is Harvard University's harsh treatment of the psychiatrist, Dr. Shervert H. Frazier, a former director of the National Institute of Mental Health.

Some psychiatrists who are admirers of Dr. Frazier, 67, called the professor "a beloved, respected elder statesman" and a man who "inspired a generation."

"There is no way to tell which sunglasses are good, and definitely not hy looking at the labels that say they block ultraviolet," Dr. Taylor said, "All glasses block some ultraviolet."

Dr. Taylor tested ordinary sun-plasses and found that they blocked from 60 to 95 percent of the ultraviolet. Most were in the 90 percent range, he said, but the darkness of the lens was no indication of how effective it was in filtering the ultraviolet light.

It has long been suspected that heavy exposure to sunlight could cause cataracts, but the Johns Hopkins study, reported in the New England Journal of Medicine, offered the first conclusive evidence.

possibility or protein deficiency but those don't occur much in America," Dr. Taylor said. "But with this study, we have at least one factor now."

The link between cataracts and ultraviolet light, he said, "is a particular concern because we may face significantly higher levels of ultraviolet B as we lose more of the ozone layer, which filters out UVB."

Researchers have shown that the ozone layer high in the Earth's at-mosphere is decaying, apparently because of the accumulation of artifical chemicals.

Dance: An American in Brussels

Paul L. Montgomery New York Turks Service

RUSSELS - The American choreographer Mark Morris and his dance company have a triumph in their oew role as residents in the Monnaie Theater, succeeding Maurice Bejart. The world premiere of Morris's "L'Allegro, Il Penseroso ed Il Moderato," set to Handel's music and based on Milton's odes, got long applause and glowing reviews. Le Soir, the leading French-language newspaper, compared Morris's arrival to the glittery days when Belgium was part of the Burgundian and Hapsburg kingdoms and the monarch made festive visits to be received by the nobility

The departure of Bejart last year in a huff for Lausanne, Switzerland was a traumatic event in the cultural life of Brussels. The French-born choreographer and his Ballet of the 30th Century had made a name for the city in the realm of dance from the time Bejart arrived in 1959. The cause of the departure was a power dispute with Gerard Mor-tier, a 42-year-old former lawyer who runs the Monnaie Theater. Mortier's opera company has become one of the most prominent in Europe, building on small-scale productions of Mozart.

For the 24 dancers in the compaoy it is a different life from New York, not having to call up every day to find where the company is meeting or working in restaurants to make ends meet. "Our opportunities are definitely better," said Rnth Davidson, a 32-year-old New Yorker who has been with Morris since 1980. "But I've been writing home to my parents that this is the Cincinnati of Europe."

Many of the American dancers seem to have seen enough of the city's persistent cold winter rains and provincial attitudes. "I understand now that it's cold and it's gray," said Keith Sabado, 34. "But my French is getting a little bit better and my spousal unit arrives soon and I miss them desperately." "Yeah," said Morris, an outspoken, welcoming man who wore the pink triangle of the gay activist on his lapel for his first news conference in Brussels, "people are freaked out here. They're not happy every second. But who is happy every second?"

For the preview Morris skipped the champagne reception spon-sored by a leading bank to drink beer with his dancers. He already speaks a serviceable French l've been to France a million times," he said - and was looking forward to the company's tour this month to Spain, where he studied lamenco as a teenager.

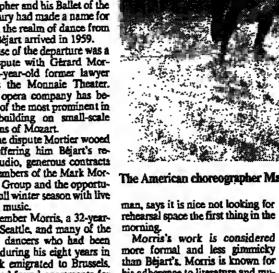

"I don't know, I'm so relieved to be out of the States, with the election and all," Morris said. "It's so depressing there. I'm sure that Belgium will change my work. Indigestion will change my work, if you want to know the truth."

Auction Houses Walk Tightrope

ONDON - Anction houses are once again L playing a tight-rope act and in the process the number of casualties is rising steeply. The demand for art on a worldwide scale

mirrored in the latest cascade of record prices is making itself felt at a time when supplies are shrinking. Carried away by their anxiety to get a bigger share of what is still available for sale, auction house experts find it difficult to resist the unrealistic reserves demanded hy vendors threatening to go over to the competition. This week, the consequences of an increasingly unhealthy situation were spectacular in both houses.

Christie's auction looked splendid on Monday thanks largely to the record sale of Picas-so's "Acrobate et Jeune Arlequin" to Japanese buyers for £20.9 million ($38.5 million).

The auction was also greatly helped by a Monet landscape, historically important because it was executed during the first year of Impressionism which starts around 1872. Monet's "Impression de Soleil Levant" done in November 1872 is the painting that inspired an art critic to coin the adjective "Impres onist." Christie's "Le Pont de Chemin de Fer à Argenteuil," painted by Monet in the summer of 1873, not only belongs to the right period, but is further enhanced by its history. It appeared at the famous Drouot auction held in 1874 when the Impressionists tried their luck with the general public. It was sent by the buyer, the Parisian opera singer Jean-Baptiste Faure, to the Second Impressionist Exhibition, along with eight other Monets he had acquired. It was admired by the French poet Stephane Mallar-me who mentioned it in an article, 'The Impressionists and Edouard Manet" published in September 1876 in an art monthly. All this is brilliantly exploited by Christie's whose catalogue entry reads like a piece in a scholarly journal. There aren't many of these early Impressionist paintings outside museums, and, although this one can hardly be claimed to be Monet's greatest, it went up to £6,820,000 without any difficulty. A third picture in the sale helped, although it was of a lesser stature. Also hy Monet, it was boosted by the psychological effect of the "Le Pont Japonais, Bassin aux Nymphéas", adated 1900, is typical of the Neo-Impressionist phase in Monet's work, with its broader brushwork. It owes even more of its price, £6,655,000, to Christie's inspired cataloguing. The expert's stroke of genius was to dig up a photograph of Monet's garden at Giverny taken in September 1900 by Joseph Durand-Ruel. The painting is thus startlingly shown to be slavishly close to nature, including the weeping willow at the left. It is as if one were looking over the master's shoulder with the paint still dripping on the canvas

The other clever trick was to run it side by side in the catalogue with a famous Japanese woodblock, Hirosbige's "Wisteria Drum Bridge," which provides the model for the "Japanese Bridges" that became the rage in France at the time. Transformed into an icon of early East-West artistic exchange, the "Japanese Bridge" came close to matching the price of the earlier Monet, even though it cannot compare with it in rarity, or desirability by Western standards.

These pictures, particularly the Picasso, car-ried the sale. The latest technique in auction salesmanship is to hype to death what lends itself to hype and hope that the fallout will help the rest. There were a few more huge prices -a record Signac ("Venise - Le Nuage Rose") at £1.1 million, a record Dufy ("La Plage à Sainte-Adresse," a Fauvist landscape of 1906) at £704,000, a record Klee ("Nekropolis," dated 1929, during the painter's Egyptian phase) at £1.65 million.

But these were of no avail to a string of pictures with inflated "estimates," reflecting corresponding reserve prices standing mostly at about 10 percent below the low estimate. Gauguin's "Ferme en Bretagne," painted at Pont-Aven in 1886 but without any of the characteristics of the marvelous style of the Pont-Aven school which emerged shortly after, fell flat on its face as the hainmer went down at £520,000. Comparison with the printed estimate, £500,000 to £700,000, suggests that the owner may have notched up his reserve at the 11th hour. As a result of similar miscalculations, 26 out of the 68 works of art found no buyer in an same kind of mistakes. Not having the fortune of couoling stars of such magnitude as the 1904 Picasso, they were less successful at keeping up an appearance of victory. In the evening session where sales amounted to £38.8 million, the failure rate exceeded 22 percent in value, with 27 lots out of 96 remaining stranded. Most revealing is the high proportion of failures in the first part of the sale. The pictures came from the collection of the late Gisèle Rueff-Béghin,

A day later it was Sotheby's turn to make the who passed away in 1983, oot from sundry commercial sources. If seven out of 26 pictures CON were bought in, this can only be a result of the disproportionate estimates either imposed by the vendors or submitted in the course of intense competition.

"Danseuse aux bras leves," by Degas, estimated to be worth £500,000 to £700,000, was unsold at £420,000. With the right leg that looks disjointed and something seemingly wrong in the top corner right, unfinished or restored, it stood little chance of making even that. Another Degas, "Quatre Danseuses au foyer de la danse," more alluring in its composition and of great interest to Americans for its provenance - the Whittemore collection in Naugatuck, Connecticut, which it entered in 1893 - suffered from a handicap candidly conceded in the entry. At some point the charcoal outlines in the pastel have been gone over by some overzealous restorer (the cataloguer speaks of "reinforcing" some of the contours of the figures). Bearing this in mind, the last bid at about £1 million should have been seen as a brilliant success. Instead the auctioneer, clearly bound to a higher reserve, went one bid more and bought it in at £1.2 million.

True, Sotheby's scored here and there. A wonderful but small portrait of Mademoiselle Henriot, done by Renoir in 1876 at the height of his Impressionist inspiration, sold very well at £2.08 million. Cleanne's "Arlequin" was astoundingly successful at £4.4 million after a sticky start. Monet's very pretty "Nympheas" dated 1908 was dearly paid at £5,720,000, even if this only matches the middle of the estimates. But the dull atmosphere and the long faces of theby's staff said lots about the ordeal and sold in London in a single session, £55,440,000. the lessons to be drawn. Speculation is now

ECONOMIC SCENE

The 'Voice of the Market' Is the Voice of the Analyst

By LEONARD SILK

New York Times Service T EW YORK - It is a Wall Street convention for analysts to interpret the market as though it were a mystical being with a collective mind of its own. One economist asserts, "The market is suffering from anxi-ety over the budget deficit." A second insists, "The market is not as hysterical about the deficit as some economists, but is worrying about Fed policy and rising interest rates." A third says, "The market is looking beyond the budget deficit, inflatioo and interest rates to focus on the leveraging of U.S. corporations and the financial system risk."

What one actually hears, of course, is not the voice of the market, like a patient on an prime rate. from 10 percent, stock prices moved higher. Why? Some market players thought the rise in the prime rate was so long overdue that vit had already been discounted. Similarly the rise in the prime rate would ordinarily have been expected to spark a rise in the dollar. Instead, the dollar slipped further. Was this, again, because the foreign-exchange market had anticipated the rise in the prime? Or was it because the market was still worrying about something else - the budget deficit, inflation or the assumed inability of the Fed and foreign central banks to hold up the dollar?

Andrew Hodge, vice president for corporate treasury services of the New York branch of Bank Brussels Lambert, says the Fed is tightening money, not because of domestic inflation but to prevent a precipitate decline in the dollar.

F SUCH A FALL was a substantiat in the hemorrhaging of funds out of dollars, a substantiat inter-U.S. interest rates and a sharp recession, which would be U.S. interest rates and a sharp recession, which would be used by a collapse of beavily leveraged corporations, in the ridden Third insolvent savings and loan institutions and debt-ridden Third World countries.

* The market is gravely troubled by the budget deficit, notwithstanding the continuous reassurances of such odd bedfellows as the supply-side economists and old-fashioned Keynesians about the relative smallness of the deficit, which totaled $155 billion in 1988.

- The General Accounting Office, an arm of Congress, has issued a report saying that the budget problem is "substantially worse than appears on the surface." First of all, it said, the reported deficit of $155 billion deficit in 1988 actually consisted of a surplus of $97 billion in the trust funds and a deficit in the general funds of $252 billion. It said the Congressional Budget Office estimated that the general fund deficit would head toward $300 billion in the early 1990s, masked the rapidly growing Social Security surpluses.

; Second, the GAO said, there is "an explosion of unfunded second, the OAO said, there is "an explosion of unfunded costs" waiting to greet the Bush administration; the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. is insolvent and there are "about 500 insolvent thrifts, which are losing money at the rate of almost $17 billion per year."

The Energy Department, the GAO went on, faces the task of cleaning up and modernizing its "aging and environmentally hazardous" nuclear weapons production complex, involving 50 facilities around the country; that will cost $100 billion to $130 lion over a period of years. And the Defense Department, it

Japanese Will Soon Be Sinking Sundowners From the West

TOKYO - When Japan's system of liquor taxes is overhauled next April, drinkers are expected to turn increasingly to imported liquor, analysts and industry officials said.

Taxes will be slashed on premium spirits and wine, a category covering most imports, while taxes will be raised on lower-grade spirits, covering local drinks such as sake and shochu, or potato spirit. "The current Japanese liquor tax has been in place for decades, so this is a major reform," said an industry analyst at a major Japanese brokerage house. The immediate reaction of some Japaoese will be to spurn local offerings, dither about what to drink, and finally go for keys "will rise to 20 percent soon after April and then to 25 percent about three years later," predicted Mark Bedingham, manager at the Tokyo office of Jardine Wines & Spirits KK, a joint venue of Jardine Matheson Holdings Ltd., Guinness PLC and Moei Hennessy SA.

Currently, foreign whiskey holds about 13 percent share of the Japanese market, he said.

The official said wines costing more than 1.500 yen a bottle would get the biggest tax break and that U.S. producers will concentrate on a high-grade wine for the Japan market next year.

The official said the organizatioo's members hoped next year to repeat the 70 percent yearly growth rate that U.S. wine imports had enjoyed over the past three years. But industry officials said the task of weaning Japanese off old faithfuls and

"We expect a severe campaign oext year," said a representative of a major importer said. "It will be quite an expense."

A spokesman for Suntory said his company was planning a major new advertising campaign focusing oo whiskey.

Beer sales are also expected to rise on the tax reform. "There is going to be a surge in domestic beer buying and im-ported beer is on an incredible surge already, which will be heightened by the tax cut," said Patricia Horvath, an analyst at Barclays de Zoete Wedd in Tokyo.

count, the widest measure of a nation's trade, reinforced what many economists began to fear several months ago — that the adjustment of Japan's trade balance may be coming to an end.

In another report that is likely to reinforce that concern, the Finance Ministry said the merchandise trade surplus almost doubled in the first 20 days of November, to $4.08 billion from $2.088 billion in the same period a year earlier.

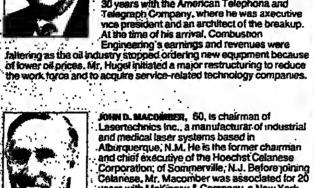

The indication of that appeared in the figures for the first 20 days of "This reversal in the trade surplus adjustment is progressing very, very strongly," said Kenneth Courtis, senior economist at DB Capital Markets (Asia) Ltd. However, a Finance Ministry of-

NEW YORK - Few Wall Street dramas have generated as much debate as the strenuous bidding for RJR Nabisco Inc., which culminated this week in a deal to sell the company to Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co, for almost $25 hillion.

What does it say about U.S. financial markets when a company that was worth $55 a share in the stock market one day is valued at $75 by its top management the next day and six weeks later is sold at an auction for $109 a share?

It was not, after all, a Picasso painting that wa the subject of a breathless bidding war. It was RJR Nabisco, a company made up of assets that are eminently real and quantifiable. What could be so mysterious about placing a value on Fig Newtons? Easy answers to these questions are so plentiful they are almost ricocheting off Wall Street's canyons. Among the most popular: The public markets are incapable of understanding the true value of corporate assets; management was trying to steal the company from underneath the noses of its shareholders; Wall Street, steeped in greed and ego, ran amok and overbid for the company. Each of these competing theories probably contains some element of truth. But in trying to explain the RJR Nabisco phe-nomenon, Wall Street deal makers maintain that assumes new proportions.

those reasons, and others, are necessary to fully explain how and why this additional "value" was created.

Some of the answers are specific to this deal, some are indicative of the state of the markets. Much of the explanation lies in the starkly different ways companies are measured and run when they are private as opposed to when they are public entities. The story begins with the public stock market, where many stocks have been depressed in value since the collapse of October 1987.

Add the fear of lawsuits tied to tobacco, which could result in huge liabilities for RJR Nabisco.

Designs on time

Individually made with a degree of skill and care that belongs to a former time, Corum Watches carry design into the future.

The Admiral Quattro epitomises this with the distinctive feature of four small dials showing the day, date. month and cardinal points of the compass. The strong and virtually scratchproof tungsten-carbide links that make up the bracelet are fastened together with solid gold bolts.

West German Banks Move Into New Fields

Reuters FRANKFURT - The big three West German banks, which already sell securities, are moving into what they call Allfinanz, or universal financial services.

Unlike their American counterparts, the West German banks are allowed to offer a whole range of banking services. Now they are broadening the range to include more insurance and home loans.

It was the biggest of the German banks, Deutsche Bank AG, that began the move by setting up a savings and loan association m 1987. Before the end of the year, Deutsche Bank is expected to say whether it will enter the insurance market. and Commerzbank AG started to make up for lost ground. Wolfgang Röller, the chairman

Frankfurt bankers say the diversification is partly a prelude to the creation of a single European market starting in 1992, when competition in all services is expected to increase.

insurance services, Mr. Pilz said, because such a move would bring them into competition with the huge external sales networks of existing insurers.

"The banks would have to really change," Mr. Pilz added, "It's a completely different mentality." Some bankers are worried that insurers might launch a counterattack . But Herbert Geiger, spokesman of the insurance industry associa-tion, said, "There'll be no question

It was considered too big to be taken over. So, unlike many other companies, its price had not risen in anticipation of a takeover bid. · Its stock also suffered because the company had a medley of busi-

"The market penalizes conglom-erates," said Thomas A. Saunders III, a managing director at Morgan Stanley & Co. A portfolio manager "wants management to stay fo-cused on its core basiness," he said. Enter F. Ross Johnson, the RJR Nabisco chief executive, frustrated by his inability to raise the stock 2001557 price of his company and in a good position to judge the company's potential value.

On Oct. 20, he bid $75 a share to take the company private. His plan was for Shearson Lehman Huttoo and a group of RJR Nahisco senior pany, largely with borrowed money - a leveraged buyout.

NEW YORK --- Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co. unveiled Friday the financing plan for its almost $25 billion purchase of RJR Nabisco Inc. that includes a complex assortment of bank loans, junk bonds and a little cash from its own pocket.

In a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission, the buyout firm illustrated the techniques it typically uses in leveraged buyouts, but on a far grander scale.

Kohlberg is putting up $1.5 billion in cash for the acquisition, most of which will come from a $5 billion pool of capital invested by institutional investors. Kohlberg also is lending $500 million for the acquisition, the filing said. In fact, only s little more than $15 million of its own money will go into the transaction, according to sources familiar with the financing plans. Kohlberg said that four banks --- Bankers Trust, Chase Manhattan, Citibank and Manufacturers Hanover Trust -- will lend $2.7 billion themselves and assemble a syndicate of other banks to lend an additional $14 billion.

Kohlberg's two main backers, Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. and Merrill Lynch & Co., will provide $5 billion in short-term bridge loans that will be repaid by selling high-yield junk bonds. Another $5 billion of existing RJR Nabisco debt also could become downgraded to junk bonds in the process, since the acquisi-

tioo will more than quadruple the company's debt. (AP, WP)

NEW YORK - U.S. Treasury bond prices plunged by more than a full point and Treasury bill rates soared by more than two-tenths of a percentage Friday on news that U.S. non-farm payroll employment surged 463,000 in November.

The market had expected a more moderate payrolls increase of about 244,000. The gain in October non-farm payroll was revised down to 238,000 from a previously re-ported 323,000. The November obless rate rose to 5.4 percent from 5.3 percent in October.

A FEW years ago, when I was listening to elementary-school children talk about the threat nuclear bombs present to the world, one of them, a sharp-tongued boy of 10, who had a way, sometimes, of sounding like a world-weary man of 70, asked this question of his four classmates and me How many planets can we now destroy?" We were all puzzled by the question, and so kept silent long enough to prompt an expla-nation from the questioner: "We have all these nukes, and they can destroy this world. and lots of other worlds, and they still keep making more and more [nukes], and my brother [a high school student] says they're crazy, real crazy."

Were that lad, now in the ninth grade, to read this account of interviews done with American and Russian "defense policymakers," those who plan for war and, supposedly, work to protect their nations during peacetime, he might no longer use the word "crazy." None of those the political scientist and psychologist Steven Kull questioned ficials who are determined to keep a particular nation as strong as possible.

Still, each of the 84 individuals inter-viewed knew well that both countries for years have been able effectively to destroy life on this earth. hence that boy's ironic question, and the author's central point of inquiry - the bizarre situation that has intelligent, rational people storing more and more weapons when already enough exist to turn this planet into a lethally radioactive wasteland. The Americans interviewed work in the State Department, the National Security Council, the Congress; others work in the Pentagon, some in high-level positions. The Russians are less illustrious from a military point of view.

It is the author's contention that those who every day have to make such plans and think about such matters learn to keep afloat psychologically the way the rest of us do when we are faced with a frightening and dangerous set of circumstances. We hunker down and work hard and try to be as thoughtful and rational and careful as possible.

Each person has his own balance of these modes of thought - and the author is revealing in his efforts as a psychologist to ascertain why each person favors, more or less, one or the other line. Yet psychological analysis can only go so far. A central thesis of this book asserts the irrationality of defense policymakers - their willingness to pursue more and more nuclear weapoury.

Ulti-mately, a "policymaker," whatever is happening in his or her mind, works for our elected officials and what they have said and promised to do, in order to get elected or slav in office, has enormous bearing on the nuclear strategists we pursue, as this recent election certainly reminds us.

That Playoff Aroma Is Growing Stronger

By Thomas George New York Times Service NEW YORK - The Philadel-

hia Eagles, with three more victories, would win the National Conference East championship of the National Football League.

Coach Buddy Ryan might have been pondering that at dinner Wednesday night in Veterans Stadilum when a piece of pork chop became lodged in his throat.

Ryan wound up in a hospital overnight but Thursday morning was back preparing the Eagles (8-5) for Sunday's home game against the Washington Redskins (6-7). This season, it seems, it will take more than a pork chop or, as in Mike Ditka's case, a heart attack, to keep a coach from trying to get one of the 10 playoff spots. The Buffalo Bills and Ditka's

Chicago Bears, with 11-2 records, have gained the playoffs. That leaves eight spots for the other 19 eams in contention. The Atlanta Falcons and the Miami Dolphins, though mathemati-cally in the race with 5-8 records, have little hope. But the San Francisco 49ers and the Cleveland Browns, both 8-5, still could win their divisions. The New England Patriots and Indianapolis Colts, both 7-6 in the American Conference East with the Bills, are in the hunt for a wild-card berth. The AFC West remains a three-team race — the Denver Broncos (7-6), the Scattle Scahawks (7-6) and the Los Angeles Raiders (6-7) - with each having beaten one of the others the last three weeks. Even the Redskins, the staggering Super Bowl champs, are mathe-matically in contention. The New York Giants (8-5) have the best chance to oust the Eagles, but even if the Giants win all three, the Eagles must lose once because they have beaten the Giants twice. A Don't expect the playoff field to be set until the regular-season finale.

Las Vegas odds-makers rate the Eagles 3½-point favorites Sunday against the Redskins.

Becker, Leconte Brought Down

By Thomas Bonk Las Angeles Times Service NEW YORK - Just when it seemed that Ivan Lendi had truly mastered the Masters, a major mulmational apset occurs. The Con-occticut resident born in Czechoslovakia loses to the Zurich resident born in Czechoslovakia. Jakob Hlasek, a 24-year-old base-liner whose game seems cast from the mold of Lendl, upset the world's No.-2 ranked player, 4-6, 6-3, 7-5, Thursday night in their opening match of the Nabisco Masters at Madison Square Garden.

In was a night of reversals. In the first match, Stefan Edberg of Swe-den beat Boris Becker of West Germany, 7-6 (7-5), 3-6, 6-4; in the last match. Mats Wilander of Sweden beat Henri Leconte of France, 6-2, 6-4. All four are now 1-1, with one

Grand Prix tournaments and finish second in another in the last three weeks

And, after staring down a 2-4 deficit in the third set against Lendi, Hlasek came back again. He broke Lendl at 4-5 and served an ace at match point.

Before that, Hlasek had lost to Leadl on every surface except ice: oo grass (Wimbledon '83); on car-pet (Rotterdam '84, Milan '86); on clay (French Open '86) and on a hard court (U.S. Open '88).

But, he ended a 14-match wining streak at the Masters, where Lendl had not lost since the 1985 final, when Brad Gilbert beat him. But then Lendl is getting used to losing, having dropped four exhibi-tion matches in the last three weeks since returning from arthroscopie shoulder surgery. And he is not liking it.

"I still feel I should win every match I play," he said. "The prob-lem is, I don't. It's starting to hack me off, to be honest."

Lendl, 0-1, faced virtual elimina-tion if he lost Friday night to Andre Agassi of the United States. On the same program, Hlasek was to play Tim Mayotte (0-1) of the United States and Becker was to face Loconte.

For Murray's sake, as well as the future of both teams, the Dodgers' Fred Claire and the Orioles' Roland Hemond must fight their way through the obstacles between those general managers and make this deal happen. If the ultimate impasse is money — as it now seems — then the Orioles should buy out as much as a third of the $8.4 million left oo Murray's ridiculously huge contract. Everybody in major league baseball knows that the best move the Dodgers could possibly make would he to get Murray. They might even repeat as world champions. He is the Hall of Fame-bound cleanup hitter their pathetic offense requires. Inserted between Kirk Gibson and Mike Marshall, his switch hitting could transform the Dodger attack. Who cares if Fedro Guerrero and Steve Sax are some? So what if John Tudor and Fernando Valenznela have become mystery arms? With Murray, the Dodgers have hopes. Everybody also knows that the best move the Onoles could make would be to deal

Murray for a top pitcher and prospects. They might even be a contender someday. At the moment, Baltimore has a half-dozen promising young pitchers, like Pete Harnisch, Bob Milacki and Gregg Olson. What the Orioles need is a decent, durable, hard-throwing ace who can stabilize a young staff on which the main potential is for chaos. Either Tim Leary (17-11) or playoff hero Tim Belcher would suffice, although Belcher would be harder to pry away because he's younger. The Dodgers also have the kind of minor leaguers the Orioles need; picking the pockets of other folks is a Hemond specialty. Now is his chance. He likes Juan Bell, brother of George, a shortstop who could allow Cal Ripken Jr. to move to third base. Outfielder Mike Devereaux pleases him, too.

subject arises. "The more you talk about a salary is about a million dollars a year too deal in progress, the less often it happens," be said Thursday from a pay phone in Chica-go's O'Hare Airport. Where was he going? To a meeting under an El stop with Claire, three agents, seven accountants and a soothsayer? No comment. Too important.

A trade that once was a long shot has radually evolved into a near sure thing. Over the last four months of the 1988 season, Murray hit almost as well as he ever has: .300, with plenty of power. Meanwhile, after the Dodgers traded cleanup man Guerrero, pened if a few of his brothers had been around they batted barely .200 in September.

Suddenly, the Dodgers realized that Murray fit them like a tuxedo. The arrival of Orel Hershiser as Walter Johnson; the blossom-ing of Leary and Belcher; the expected return of Valenzuela and the glorious future predicted for Ramon Martinez allow them to think about trading a pitcher. Even if Tudor shouldn't be back until August.

Finally, former Orioles Rick Dempsey and John Shelby convinced the Dodger brass that, in a winning clubhouse, Murray would be an unselfish, motivated hero in the clutch. Besides, if any manager could break The Murray Doldrums, it would be Tommy Lasorda, who could teach a grizzly bear table manners.

As for the Orioles, they'd love to trade Murray. And wisely so. On a losing club, he lapsed into sulking and growing almost fat, siz. As recently as the spring of 1986, Reggie Jackson called Murray "the best player in baseball." Because he was. The last three years have exposed the worst in Murray. Yet even that is not so bad. POSTCARD Among the Cereal Boxes

By Douglas Martin New York Times Service

NEW YORK - As the short, rumpled man pushes his cart up and down supermarket aisies, he tries to strike up conversations with fellow New Yorkers. Lest you've already concluded he's unhinged, perverted or participating in some weirdo Learning Annex course, let it be hastily stated that the man has an unimpeachable ulterior motive.

Robert Sandelman, 61, has made millions and millions of dollars from such chitchat, always listening for people's between the lines messages.

That comes with the territory for this wizard of sales promotion the arcane business of getting people to pay attention to a product. He claims to have started the first agency solely devoted to sales promotion, Robert Brian Associates. The tools of Sandelman's business are packaging, coupons, free samples and the advantageous positioning of goods in stores - but his best are his solid hunches about what people really want.

The opportunity is awesome: "Just think," he said, "two and a half times a week Americans go to supermarkets and are separated from their money in wonderful deals they can't figure out."

Sandelman is the guy who hit upon the ideas of selling gournet coffee beans by metric measure so you wouldn't know what you paid for them, and of sending 100 people to a castle in Kent, England, for winning a Kent cigarettes contest. But all that pales before his dream project, conceived a dozen years ago and approved recently by the chairman of RJR Nabisco. Sandelman is preparing live entertain-ment for frustrated souls waiting in line. "Look at the anger in those faces," he said delightedly in the Sloan's Supermarket at Second Avenue and 40th Street.

Anger seemed par for the course as Sandelman prowled from produce to paper to poultry in the 10,000-square-foot market. "What 10.000-sqt department did you get that durahle in?" he asked a young mother, pointing to her baby and smiling pleasantly. She seemed to shudder before shricking the obvious: "Get you're going to take them." So he wandered on down the soap aisle, breaking into rhyme when he noticed the missed opportunity at linking paper towels and soap in a single promotion. "Buy three, the fourth is free," chirped the self-proclaimed inventor of the idea of using cereal boxes to tout other products. In Robert Brian's offices on Fifth Avenue — the firm was named for Sandelman and a first son who declined to go into the business, becoming a chef instead -Sandelman reminisced. He said he first heard of sales promotion in 1947 when he uncharacteristically awoke during a lecture at NYU's business school. The professor was explaining that advertising is selling a message in a medium clients rent (like TV), while promotion is selling a message — usually the same one — in a medium they own

That bought a cigarette then, but he dropped the coin in the sewer. "I am now broke," he said. There is no place I can go but up." True enough. He said the other day, "Without boasting to you, but in point of fact, I can tell you I'm worth millions today."

Sandelman is scheming to bring Broadway shows to the smaller cities of America, with boxtops paying for tickets. And every day he and his 15 employees have been dreaming up tongue twisters to promote a new Nabisco product modeled on those little goldfish crackers you see in bars. The La Scala management and representatives for the chorus are eduled to hold a new round of talks in Milan after the chorus, rejecting a labor agreement, left a rehearsal on Friday of Rossini's "William Tell." A spokeswoman said the 130 members of the chorus did not agree on internal company concessions which had been accepted by their unions and by the orchestra. She said that the opening on Wednesday of the opera season may he postponed if the next three scheduled rehearsals are canceled. Riccardo Muti is directing "William Tell" which stars the American tenor, Chris Merritt. п

The artist Jasper Johns, whose paintings are leading the market for contemporary art, has been elected to the 50-member American Academy of Arts and Letters along with the writer Mary McCarthy and the composer John Cage.
